THE JUNGLE BOOK

RUDYARD KIPLING

Adapted by Jesús Cortés • Drawings by Laura Pérez Granell

Daddy wolf, mummy wolf and their wolf cubs lived in a jungle in India. One day, they found a baby lost in the bushes. Then, they heard the roar of Shere Khan, an evil tiger who was following the baby's tracks. Mummy wolf took the baby to the cave where the other wolves lived.

"His name will be Mowgli," she said. Since the human cub could not harm them, the wolves accepted him.

But Shere Khan discovered them and got really angry.

"He's my prey," roared the tiger. "And someday I will hunt him."

Over the years, Mowgli grew up with his cub siblings. He had also become close friends with Baloo, a lazy bear who taught him how delicious honey with nuts was.

Mowgli also became friends with Bagheera, a black panther who taught him how to climb trees.

"Climb here, little brother."

Baloo, Bagheera, and an old wolf named Akeela, taught him everything he needed to know about the jungle laws.

"You can hunt for food," told Baloo. "But not for fun."
