Suggestions

for enjoying this story even more:

1

Find as many animals as you can in the first picture of the woods. Count them!

2

Imagine what the giants say to scare the animals. For example: I'm going to eat youuuuu up!

3

Sing whatever Milo repeats, however you'd like.

4

Create your own melody for Milo's mom's song.

5

Sing Milo's songs in a different way each time. For example: With a rock beat, very quickly, like an opera.

6

Use a squirrel voice, tiny and high, to read when she speaks to Milo.

7

What do you think the wolf trainer is yelling? For example: One, two, three, four...!

8

Breathe in deep before howling.

9

Make all the onomatopoeia sounds!

10

When Milo gets to the top of the mountain, his friends are waiting for him. Use a different voice for each animal.

11

During the training, make up a movement using your arms for each sound.

12

Dare to say the onomatopoeias faster each time.

13

When you finish, talk about the story and share your opinions.

14

Ask questions like: "What was your favorite character?"

15

Use a sheet of paper to draw your favorite moments from the story.

16

Try to guess how many times Milo appears in the book.

For all the dreamers
willing to turn their lives upside down
to make their dreams come true.
And most of all for those who support the dreamers.

Especially for Tatata,
the most incredible grandmother anyone could ever have.
Even at 94 years old she still is behind me every step I take.

This is the story of a wolf.

But not the big, bad one you've heard so much about, no...
This wolf has a whoooooole lot of friends, he isn't fierce yet, and his name is Milo. Can you find him?

Ever since the day he was born, Milo imagined that one day, suddenly,

he would turn into a fierce wolf.

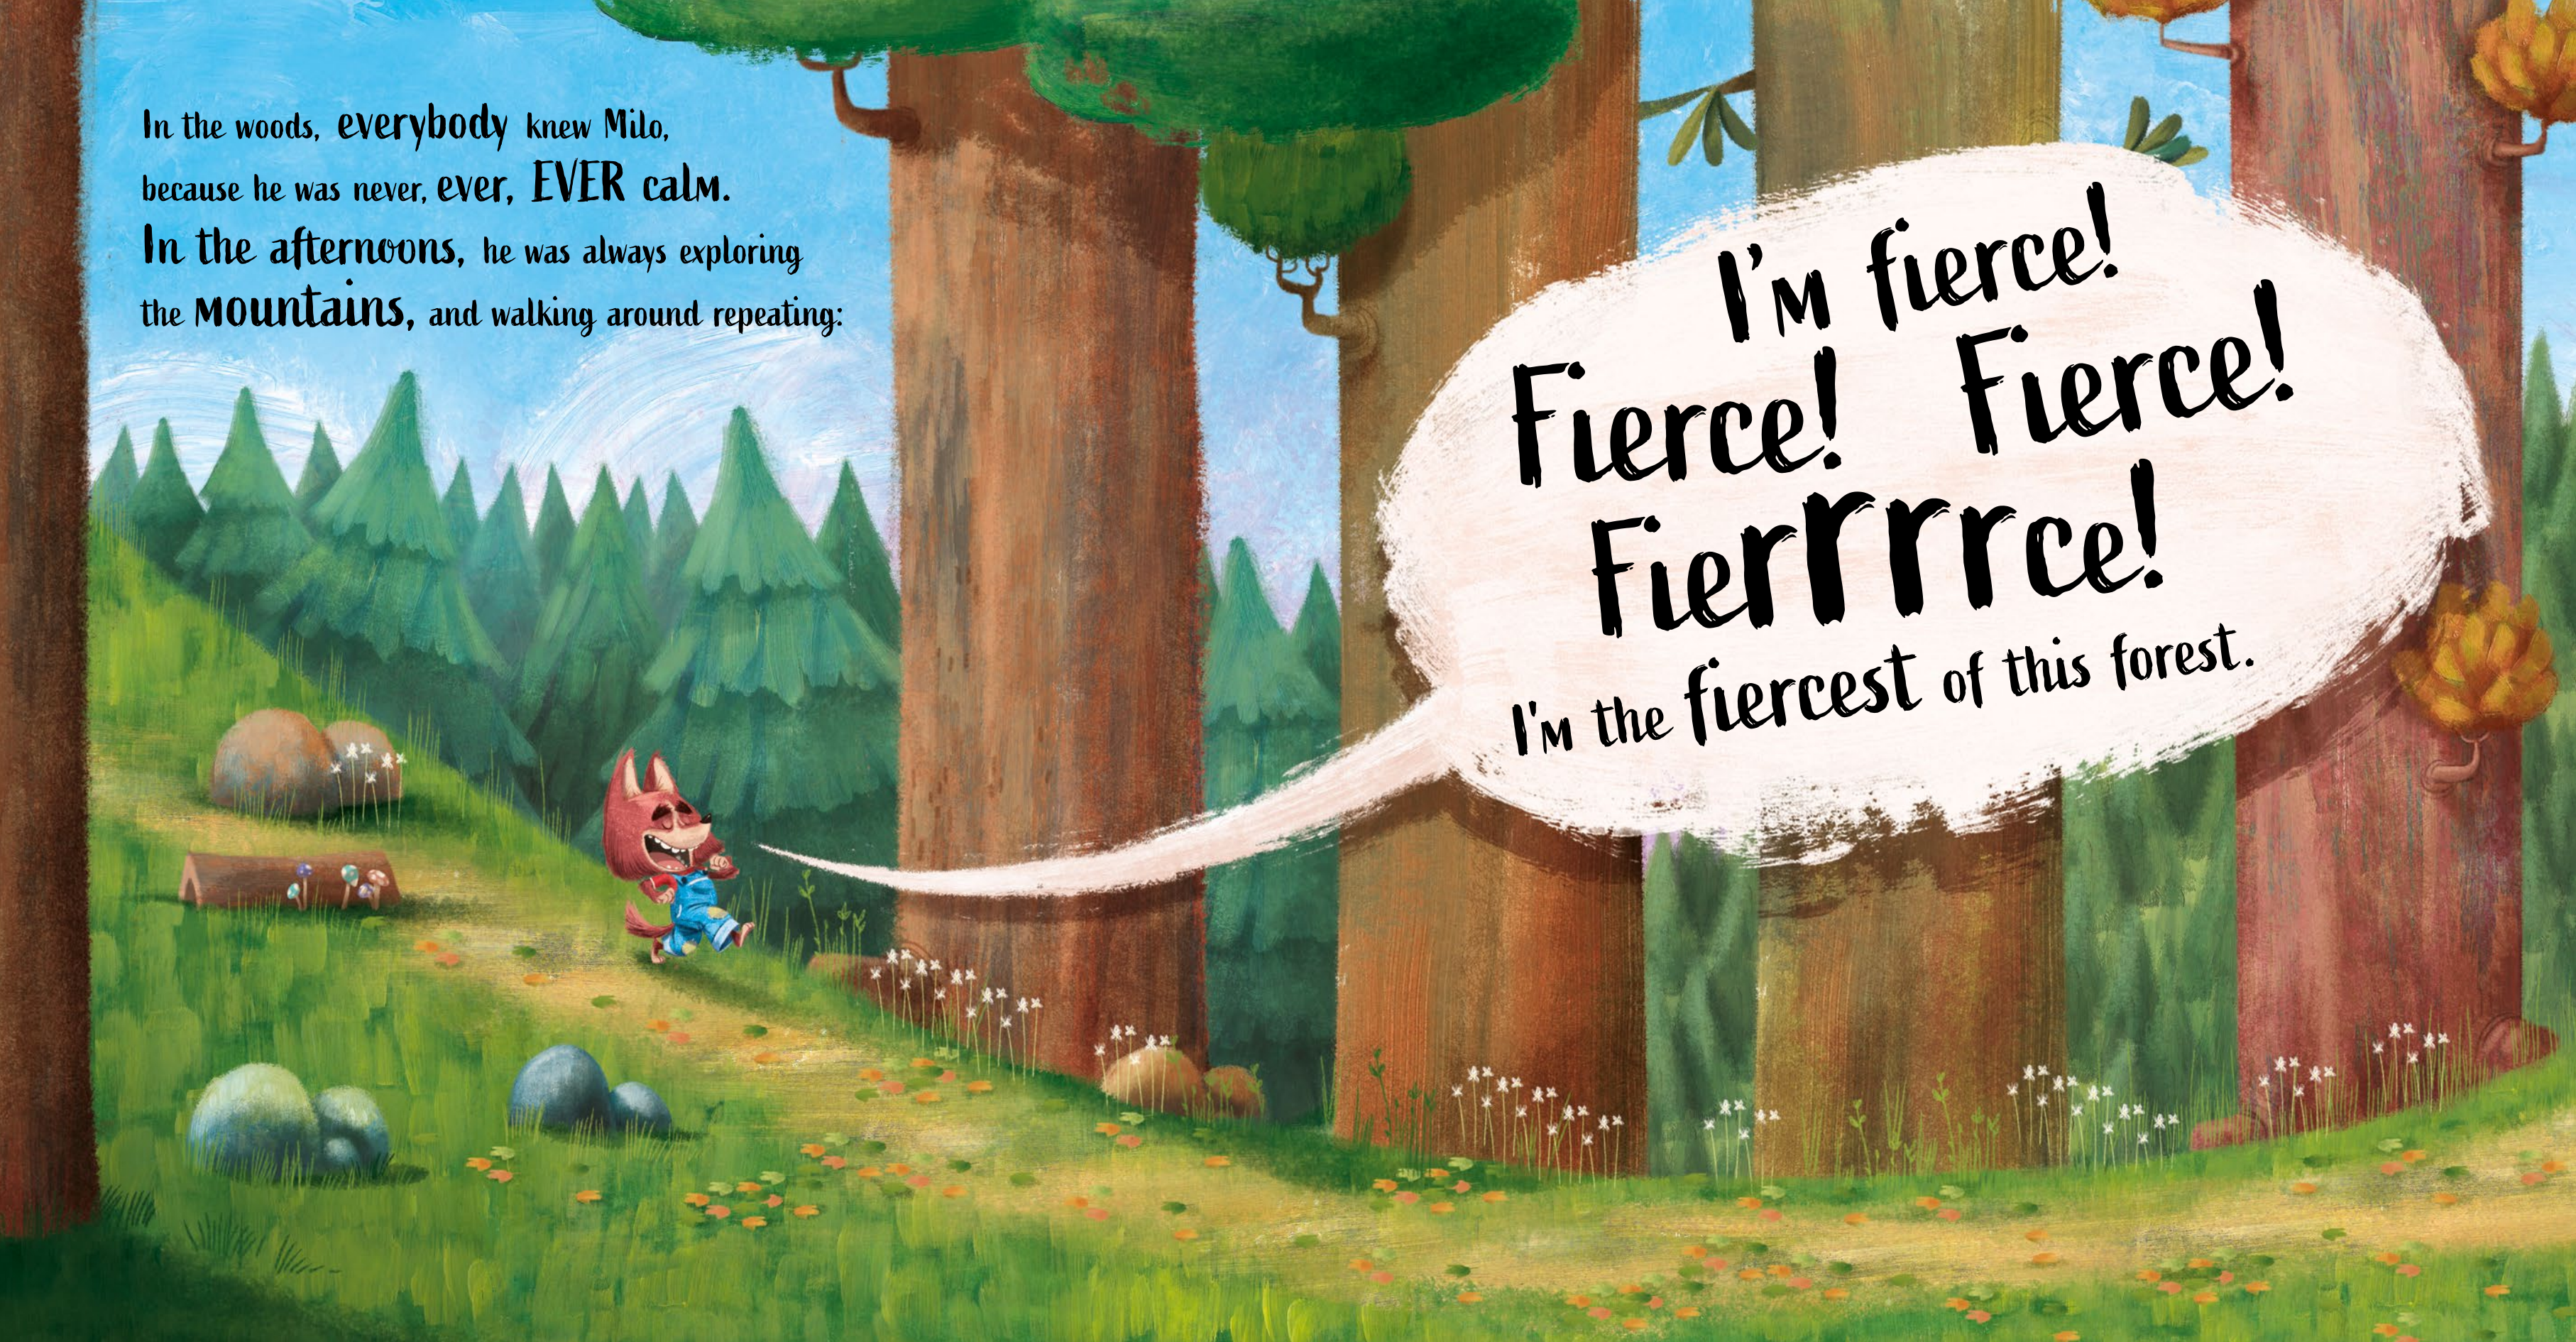

Every night he dreamed about his great battles!
He longed for the day when his claws would sharpen,
and his legs would become very, VERY fast.

He wanted to rescue animals and fight giants.

In the woods, everybody knew Milo,
because he was never, ever, EVER calm.

In the afternoons, he was always exploring the Mountains, and walking around repeating:

I'm fierce!
Fierce! Fierce!
Fierrrrce!

I'm the fiercest of this forest.

It all began because, when he was little, his MOM would whisper in his ear:

“Milo,
you will be the fiercest wolf!
You’ll have the strength of the trees.
You’ll run as fast as the wind.
You’ll defend the pack with your claws.
And your howl will travel through the mountains.”

He never forgot his mother’s lullaby.
